Honolulu Seawater Air Conditioning LLC said Thursday that the Honolulu City Council has granted the company three nonexclusive easements within the streets of downtown Honolulu for its seawater air conditioning cooling system.

The granting of the easements, which will allow Honolulu Seawater Air Conditioning to install its chilled-water distribution piping throughout the city, moves the company closer to being able to begin construction of the $200 million system.

“We are grateful for the continuous support from the various city agencies and the utility companies and look forward to our continued cooperation, together leading downtown Honolulu toward a greener future,” President and CEO Bill Mahlum said in a statement.
